Information About Reception of the Sacraments

The seven Sacraments of the Church were instituted by Christ to confer grace.

Sacrament of Baptism. Call the parish office to register for the parents' pre-Baptismal instruction. For adults seeking to enter the Church and be Baptized, contact our Religious Ed. Office.

Sacrament of Penance (Confession). Children in our religious education program and school are prepared for Confession at age seven, as part of First Communion preparation.

Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist. Children in our religious education program and school are prepared for First Communion at age seven. Adults seeking First Communion should contact our Religious Ed. Office

Sacrament of Confirmation. Young people in our parish are prepared for reception of Confirmation in the ninth grade (age 14). For adults seeking Confirmation contact our Religious Ed. Office.

Sacrament of Marriage. Couples planning for Marriage are to contact a parish priest or deacon one year in advance to set the wedding date and plan for pre-Cana instruction.

Sacrament of Holy Orders. If you believe you have, or someone you know has, a vocation to the Priesthood or Diaconate, please contact one of our parish priests.

Anointing of the Sick. For the Sacrament of Anointing of the Sick (sometimes called "Last Rites") administered by a Priest, a person or immediate family member must make the request. Late night requests may not be able to be answered until the next day. For a visitation to the sick, or Holy Communion to the sick, contact our parish office.

Cuius regio, eius religio. This is a Latin phrase which means, "The religion of the king is the religion of the people." And it is this phrase and a political doctrine that was a game changer in the history of Europe, but whose effect was later felt worldwide. After many years of Europeans war between Catholics and Lutherans, an agreement called the Peace of Augsburg was adopted in 1555. Central to that document was "cuius regio, eius religio" -- which directed that whatever the religion of the king was, would be the official religion of the Kingdom. That tenet of agreement was later extended, in 1648, by the Peace of Westphalia, amongst all Christian faiths in Europe.

Meanwhile in 2019. Why am I blathering about centuries-old treaties in this 2019 Pastor's column? Oddly enough, because I want to talk about the origin and history of the Catholic School system in the United States -- and to do so, referencing the Peace of Augsburg and the Peace of Westphalia, allows that history to be more understandable.

The Empires Strike Back. America, as we know, was settled primarily by the British, the French, and the Spanish Empires. And it was settled very much with the idea of "cuius regio, eius religio." Thus Spanish and French colonized areas in what is now the United States, saw Catholic education crop up earlier in our nation's history, while British areas saw Protestantism (primarily in the form of Anglicanism and Puritanism) take greater root.

Old School. And so, let's step into the Wayback machine and set the dial for 1606, and bring your sunblock, we're going to Florida. Back in 1606, just only 114 years after Christopher Columbus' royal Caribbean cruise, Florida was a colony of the Spanish Empire. There, in the City of St. Augustine, a military outpost for Spain the first Catholic School in the new world was established; it educated the children of soldiers, slaves and Indians.

Welcome Back, Kateri. Later in that same century, in what was called "Lower Canada" (i.e., Quebec), and in New Orleans -- both French territories -- Catholic schools were also established: by the Jesuits in Canada and by the Franciscan Order and the Ursuline Sisters in New Orleans. As a matter of fact, in one of the Jesuit schools, the first American-born saint, St. Kateri Tekakwitha, was educated. This American Indian girl, eventually converted to Catholicism. She ultimately returned to another Jesuit school in Montreal and helped to teach another generation of American Indian children -- somewhat like a version of "Welcome Back, ~~Ketter~~-Kateri."

Meanwhile, in Maryland. So, in the Spanish and French territories, under the banner of cuius regio, eius religio, a limited number of Catholic Schools came forth during these early days of settlements in America. But what about in the British colonies, where the religion of the King (of England) was Anglican? Well, there were a few attempts by the Jesuit in 18th century Maryland; not very successful, however. Other attempts by the Franciscans in Old Bohemia (here in Delmarva) were more successful.

With a Firm Purpose of Amendment. In 1783, at the close of the American Revolution, the first parochial school (St. Mary's in Philadelphia) was established. Then in 1789, Georgetown University was established (with tuition at about seven dollars per year). But it wasn't until the passage of our Constitution's

Bill of Rights in 1791, with the First Amendment's Freedom of Religion guarantee -- which officially ended the doctrine of "cuius regio, eius religio" -- that Catholic education began to expand. (Of note: Delaware, Pennsylvania and Virginia's delegations each rejected the approval of the First Amendment; however, it passed nonetheless).

A Tale of Two Cities. By the mid-19th century, Catholic schools began to crop up in good numbers in places such, especially Baltimore, and Philadelphia. However, the ever-growing Catholic population of our nation, in the form of vast numbers of immigrants, exceeded the resources available. As such, Protestant schooling remained overwhelmingly the norm, as the need for Catholic schooling increased.

Ideas from Ireland. Bishop John Ireland of Minnesota tried to put in a system wherein Catholic students would go to public schools, but those schools would in turn provide Catechism classes at the end of each school day. Archbishop John Hughes of New York (whose picture hangs in my room at the Holy Cross rectory), pressed for Catholic schools to be operated at public expense, just as many Protestant schools of the era were. Both ideas met with rejection, and the problem of a shortage of Catholic education in our nation remained.

Good and Plenary. In 1884, the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore called for the establishment of a Catholic School at every parish in the nation. Likewise, they added: "All Catholic parents are bound to send their children to the parochial [parish] schools ... unless it be lawful to send them to other schools on account of a sufficient cause..." And with that guidance, Catholic Schools -- while not getting built in every parish -- were popping up all over! The Catholic system bloomed like a Chiapet in a rainstorm!

Millions Served. By the start of the roaring 1920s, the growth of the Catholic School system was undeniable: there were 6,551 parochial elementary schools with 1.7 million students. In secondary education, there were now 1,500 Catholic high schools. This boom peaked in the mid-1960s when the Catholic School systems boasted 4,500,000 elementary school pupils, and 1,000,000 Catholic high school students in nearly 13,000 schools. Today, Catholic education is still strong: there are 6,289 Catholic elementary schools and high schools with an enrollment of approximately 1.8 million. Approximately 30% of these schools have a waiting list for admissions.

Here. And here in central Delmarva, in the area served by Immaculate Conception Parish and Holy Cross Parish, we are blessed with two wonderful Catholic Schools: Holy Cross School which provided Pre-Kindergarten through Eighth Grade education, and St. Thomas More Academy which covers grades nine through 12. Both have incredibly strong academic programs (with STMA boasting the top SAT scores in the entire Diocese), excellent academic results, and keep the Catholic faith central to its mission of living out Christ's command: "Go teach all nation" (cf. Matthew 28:19) If you use our Catholic schools, I thank you for entrusting your children to us; if you don't, I would commend to take a look and see the benefits that can be afforded your child by Catholic education.

Yours in Christ,
Fr. James Lentini, Pastor

SCHOOL NEWS

As a Math teacher I have always loved numbers. I love computation, and solving multi-step problems, Brainteasers keep me entertained while others enjoy exercising, sewing, or gardening. As an administrator numbers remain a source of significance for me. All summer long, there was scarcely a day when there was not a call inquiring after enrollment information. As a matter of fact, as I hastily type this entry; Mrs. Stant is speaking with a parent who is looking for school information for NEXT YEAR!!! God is so good to us!

We are grateful to the 47 new families who have made the commitment to Catholic education as we welcomed 81 new students to our Holy Cross School family.

We rolled out the proverbial red carpet on Tuesday and greatly anticipate all the new school year has in store!
